

$2,000,000 LOAN IS REQUESTED BY CITY FOR RELIEF

Memorandum Sent to Gov.
Caulfield Asks Him to Make Application for Federal Funds.

ALTERNATIVE PLAN IF BOND ISSUE FAILS

This Calls for Appeal for $4,600,000—Repayment
Through Road Fund Deductions.

A memorandum presented to Gov. Caulfield at Jefferson City today in behalf of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment requests him to apply for a $2,000,000 Federal relief loan for St. Louis and to arrange for repayment through deductions, beginning in 1935, from federal funds allotted to the State for road construction.

The communication of the Board of Estimate, composed of Mayor Miller, Comptroller Nolte and President Neun of the Board of Aldermen, was given to the Governor by Tom K. Smith, chairman of Citizens Committee, and Arthur C. Meyers of the Comptroller's office, during a conference on relief needs at all sections of the State.

The $2,000,000, the memorandum states, is needed to provide for relief needs for the rest of this year and for 1933. It suggests that a loan of $1,000,000 be applied for by the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should decide to look to only immediate needs.

Other items in proposal. The board proposes also that the governor apply for a loan of $4,600,000 if the relief bond issue proposition fails to pass in November, and that in the event directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation choose to require the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be ready to receive applications. He has indicated that he would prefer to have the cities deal directly with the corporation, but in the event the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is not ready to receive applications, the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should be ready to receive applications.

City Gets No Road Funds. In this connection the Board of Estimate's memorandum says to the Governor: "You are fully cognizant of the fact that St. Louis contributes a large percentage of the funds necessary for State roads and that it receives no share of the funds from the State of Missouri."

The Federal Act is clear in its language that this advance can be applied up against Federal road aid to the State commencing in 1935. It is known to both the Congress and the President of the United States that the road program had not yet been enacted for 1935 so, therefore, they must be fully aware of the fact that this act provides that in effect will prove a direct Federal grant for relief to the several States.

The memorandum reviews what has been done toward meeting relief needs in St. Louis and concludes that "the city is in a period of 30 months. 'You will note,' it adds, 'that the $1,000,000 will have been spent in 15 months, while the first $725,000 was spent in 15 months, showing relief expenditures have about doubled in 1932.'

Other Plans for Funds. As the city's finances were no longer able to carry this load, the committee of 71 was recently appointed by the Mayor and suggested a plan to carry the city through the balance of 1932 and the entire year of 1933. The part of that plan

Attorneys defending the sanity of Hugh W. Thomasson, elderly real estate owner, at a hearing in Circuit Judge Hoffmeister's court, replied today to the opening statement of Patrick H. Cullen of opposing counsel, who outlined a long story of what he termed "the plundering of this old man's estate."

Randolph Laughlin, head of counsel for Thomasson, told of his marriage to Mrs. Grace Carolyn Mahood, in July, 1930, which he said started "one of the most disgraceful rackets that ever polluted this court."

He said Thomasson was sane at the time and that in the period immediately preceding that, "when 15,000,000 Americans all regarded him as losing all they had," that Thomasson "didn't lose a dollar."

"I don't care if Mrs. Thomasson is the worst or the best woman in the world," Laughlin said of the real estate owner's young wife.

"Thomasson introduced her as his wife immediately after the marriage, opened a bank account for her and bought her a home. Then came the masquerading benefactors poking their noses into the Thomasson affairs."

Continuing with an attack on Thomasson's relatives, who he charged were "no closer related than Adam," Laughlin said a "carnival of lawyers and politicians lived on the litigation like vultures."

Attack on Frederick. "Thomasson," he continued, "was forced to submit to extortion to get peace. He had to run out of town and he did run. He was up to his eyes in litigation, which piled up mountains of costs enough to break a giant's back."

He pointed out Conrad E. Frederick, former associate of Mrs. Thomasson, in the courtroom, as an enemy of Thomasson. Frederick, at quiet as Laughlin said, "He has 50 aliases and has given rubber checks all over the country."

Attempting to establish that Thomasson was a resident of St. Louis, attorneys for Miss Elmina Townsend, second cousin of Thomasson who brought the suit, put on the stand Gilbert Brooks, Booneville, Ind.

Brooks, former kitchen man at the Park Plaza Hotel, told of seeing a man and woman he identified as Thomasson and his wife struggling on the street at Euclid avenue and Lenox place, Jan. 25, 1931. Thomasson, who pleaded wife was separated at that time and Thomasson was living at the Fairmont Hotel.

Helped Put Him in Auto. According to Brooks, Thomasson was resisting an attempt to put him in an automobile and Mrs. Thomasson asked, "Mister, will you help me? He is out of his mind." Despite the fact the elderly man said, "Call the police—they are kidnapping me!" Brooks said he helped Mrs. Thomasson put her husband in the automobile.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—At the conclusion of a conference between Treasury officials, leaders of the bonus marchers and their attorneys this afternoon, it was stated at the Treasury that "nothing has occurred to change the previous order," in which approximately 4000 unemployed veterans were told to evacuate their billets in the central part of the capital by midnight tonight. Herbert S. Ward, counsel for the veterans, said Commander Waters would issue a statement later.

On two previous occasions orders to the veterans to abandon their billets had been issued. Government officials were temporarily reassured, and there were indications that the third order might be withdrawn before night, or that other quarters would be provided for the men, some of whom are accompanied by their families. Prior to the conference Waters stated that the veterans would propose a compromise plan, under which the campers would evacuate "within a reasonable time if provided with other suitable quarters." At the same time he issued orders to the affected men not to move unless so instructed by him.

Three leaders of the so-called "radical" wing of the bonus marchers were found guilty in Police Court of parading without a permit and were sentenced to pay a $40 fine or to serve 40 days' imprisonment.

The men are John P. Walter, Elmer and Roy Johnson. All were arrested a week ago when attempting to get through police lines and reach the White House.

Additional charges have since been filed against them and several others for yesterday's demonstration at the White House, but hearing of these was continued until next week.

Judge J. R. Hitt pronounced the sentence. The men also were charged with disorderly conduct. On this charge Judge Hitt took their personal bond.

In a specific order Waters directed the men how to behave if an attempt is made to evict them forcibly. He told them to sit down or lie down, and compel the police to carry them out of the camps. He also instructed them to return after being evicted, if possible, but not to use force against the police or United States marshals.

Earlier in the day Treasury officials, who insist that construction must proceed on the sites at once, considered the plan of simply moving steam shovels into the camps and demolishing the shanties. The Sixth Regiment, the largest unit affected, is housed in two partly wrecked buildings, each three stories in height, and in huts, cellars, shacks and holes among the debris and rubbish of buildings already torn down.

"A Lot of Common Sense." Police Chief Glavin, who has been subjected to some official criticism for his tactful and sympathetic handling of the veterans, made the following cryptic statement to the Treasury claims:

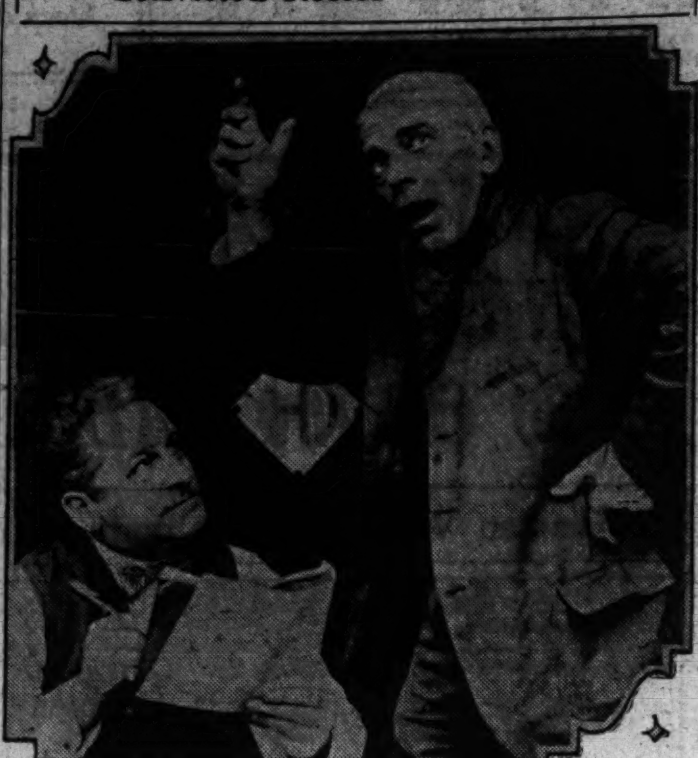

"We do not intend to drive veterans out of buildings which would remain vacant a month before the work of demolishing them is started. They will be allowed to remain in these buildings until wrecking crews appear with their tools to go to work. The eviction order is going to be carried out with a lot of common sense."

Threats of the radical group of veterans to make a demonstration in front of police court, failed to materialize. The building was heavily guarded by police, but no disorder occurred. Pace and Elmer were arrested yesterday on charges of inciting a riot, but that charge was dropped for lack of evidence, and they were charged with simple disorderly conduct, like their seven comrades.

An important if momentary improvement in the food situation occurred today when 15 gallons of milk arrived at the commissary. It was donated by two dairies and two individuals. Hoke Smith, the supply officer, said 100 gallons of milk a day would be sufficient to supply all the women and children in the camps, with some left over for coffee and cereals.

No Meat in Camp. Several children have been reported ill because of a lack of milk. Smith today was investigating a report that some large dairies were running skimmed milk into the sewer. He said if the report were true, he would appeal to the dairies to donate the milk instead of throwing it away.

Otherwise, the problem of supplies remained desperate. Beans, macaroni and cracked wheat continued to be the main supplies. There was virtually no meat in any camp. The headquarters unit has had no meat for two weeks. The first of the two daily meals today consisted of beans, macaroni and black coffee.

Leaders of the bonus marchers took steps to halt the increase of panhandling by members of the group. Smith issued credentials to 20 men authorizing them to solicit contributions, and told the police that he would prosecute any other members caught begging if the police failed to prosecute them. In reply to a wire sent to Waters, a notice of absence of panhandling among the veterans.

Veterans' Bureau officials insisted that fewer than 5000 veterans remained in the capital. Police put hard service. Your co-operation appreciated and you are authorized to qualify members of your command and bring them to Washington now. We can best serve our country by the quality of men, rather than quantity."

KID MC'COY IN DETROIT FOR WORK WITH FORD COMPANY
Out of Prison, He Will Be Physical Director; Says He Is Fit and Strong.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Mich., July 26.—Kid McCoy, once the welterweight boxing champion of the world, is in Detroit today, ready to "start over again" after his release on parole from San Quentin Prison, Cal., where he served eight years of a 10-year term for killing his sweet-heart.

McCoy, whose real name is Norman Selby, at 43, came here yesterday to take a job as physical director for the Ford Motor Co. and his companion on the journey from California was Mike, a canary, which shared his prison cell.

"I feel fit and strong," he said. "I know I'm not what I used to be, but I have some good years left, and I want them to be good years."

Harry E. Bennett, service manager of the Ford company, who was once a Navy boxer, obtained the new work for McCoy.

"I got my start in Detroit, you know," said the former pugilist. "I was hired as sparring partner here in 1923 to Tommy Ryan, then welterweight champion. I took his title away from him."

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER ENDS LIFE
He Was G. O. P. Candidate for Congress From Pennsylvania.

By the Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—Arthur Sellers, deputy coroner and Republican candidate for Congress from the Fourth Pennsylvania district, killed himself this afternoon. Sellers' death was reported to a police magistrate at the time he was to have appeared for a hearing on a charge of embezzling $6,000 from an estate. Sellers killed himself with a pistol in his home, police report.

3 FEMINIST LEADERS ARRESTED IN CUBA

Government Says Two Are Linked With Diary Seized After Explosion.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Cuba, July 26.—Three well-known Cuban feminist leaders—Dr. Ofelia Dominguez, Dr. Berta Dardet and Senora Rosa Arredondo—were imprisoned yesterday in connection with anti-government "terrorism" over the week-end.

The only explanation was that the first two named had been linked with a diary seized after an accidental bomb explosion Saturday.

The police said the diary belonged to Senorita Carlota Proenza. Two of her sisters were injured, but she escaped. Their father, Alvarez, who called at a hospital to see the two girls, was detained.

The authorities charged Senorita Proenza on the strength of the diary with previous knowledge of the plot against the life of Capt. Miguel Calvo, chief of the secret police, who was slain recently. Simultaneously the police arrested Dr. Manuel Mendia, director of the Municipal Sanitary Service and a brother-in-law of Havana's former Mayor, Miguel Mariano Gomez, who now is a revolutionary émigré in the United States.

Dr. Zenon Zamora, former Municipal Hospital physician, and six other doctors were arrested. There was no explanation of these arrests.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 26.—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, said today the consensus of congressional Democratic leaders was against any nationwide speaking tour by Gov. Roosevelt in his presidential campaign.

Farley conferred with a group of Democratic Senators and Representatives here today.

It was the opinion of the Democrats at the Capitol, said Farley, that the party campaign could be waged over the radio with occasional speeches in the East and Middle West.

It became known that the Governor plans to make his opening campaign speech in the Middle West some time next month, but the time and the place have not been fixed.

Farley said the congressional leaders were agreed upon following the party platform, including the plank for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Senator Cohen of Georgia, a new vice chairman of the National Committee, informed Farley that "the South is standing on the Democratic platform and will go overwhelmingly Democratic."

BOSS PENDERGAST GROUP ANNOUNCES CONGRESS SLATE

Lists 22 With 13 to Be Chosen—Ten Incumbents Indorsed—Johnson and Barton Omitted.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 26.—The Kansas City Democratic organization headed by T. J. Pendergast today indorsed 22 of the 56 candidates for Representative in Congress at large to be voted on in next Tuesday's primary, instead of a straight slate of 13.

Ten of the present 12 Democratic Congressmen were placed on the slate. Two were left off, Robert D. Johnson of Marshall, representing the present Seventh District, and William E. Barton of Houston, representing the Sixteenth District.

The list of candidates to which the organization will confine its support, the first 10 being present members of Congress, follows:

Milton A. Romig, Macon, First District; Ralph F. Loefer, Carrollton, Second District; Jacob L. Milligan, Richmond, Third District; Joseph B. Shannon, Kansas City, Fifth District; C. C. Dickinson, Clinton, Sixth District; William L. Nelson, Columbia, Eighth District; Clarence Cannon, Elsberry, Ninth District; John J. Cochran, St. Louis, Eleventh District; Clyde Williams, Hillsboro, Thirteenth District; James F. Fullbright, Doniphan, Fourteenth District; James R. Claborn, St. Louis; Houston H. Crittenden, Kansas City; Charles E. Dewey, Jefferson City; Richard M. Duncan, St. Joseph; Lee E. Ewing, Nevada; Frank Lee, Joplin; James E. Ruffin, Springfield; L. N. Searcy, Eminence; John D. Taylor, Keytesville; Rueben T. Wood, Springfield; Charles B. Burns, Brookfield, and Mrs. Mary E. Ryder, St. Louis.

The list includes the eight originally favored by the Pendergast organization, Loefer, Shannon, Crittenden, Cochran, Wood, Lee, Ruffin and Taylor.

No explanation was made by the Pendergast forces as to why Representatives Johnson and Barton were omitted.

Under the plan devised, the names of the 22 will go on the organization slates throughout the city and county for the followers to choose the 13 they prefer.

The decision to give indorsement to more than 13 candidates was tabulated as 111,779, it appeared that little more than half the Democrats had recorded themselves either for or against resubmission.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., July 26.—Caleb Powers, 64 years old, one of the central figures in the election troubles 30 years ago that culminated in the assassination of Gov. William Goebel, died last night at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

On his fourth trial he was convicted of conspiracy in the shooting and served eight years in the Frankfort Reformatory until pardoned in 1903 by Gov. A. E. Williams. Two years later he was elected to Congress and served three years.

He is survived by his widow, two sisters and a brother, John Powers of Florida. Funeral services will be held here Thursday.

STERLING-FERGUSON RUN-OFF PRIMARY IN TEXAS NECESSARY
"Ma" Fails to Obtain Necessary Majority; All Congressmen Seeking Renomination Win.

By the Associated Press.
DALLAS, Tex., July 26.—Gov. R. S. Sterling, seeking re-election, and Mrs. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson will oppose each other next month in the second Democratic primary, as they did two years ago, when the election on the issue of the only woman who has been Governor of Texas had increased her lead over Sterling to 77,000 votes today, but the presence of six other candidates in the first primary Saturday prevented either from gaining a majority. In Texas the Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

The votes for the three leaders were: Mrs. Ferguson, 300,800; Sterling, 223,413; Tom F. Hunter of Wichita Falls, 157,208.

Apparently all Texas Congressmen seeking renomination had won. Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic vice presidential nominee, was unopposed in the Fifth District.

Advocates of a petition to Congress asking for a new vote in the states on Federal prohibition kept a two to one lead over opponents of the plan. The figures were 281,380 to 101,497. Since the total vote tabulated was 111,779, it appeared that little more than half the Democrats had recorded themselves either for or against resubmission.

SAILOR HELD FOR ATTEMPTING TO KIDNAP 3-YEAR-OLD BOY

Maurice Wallace, who had been drinking, was arrested last night at Tenth and Chestnut streets on a charge of attempted kidnaping after he took three-year-old William Merritt for a walk.

Wallace, who had been drinking, saw the boy in front of the Merritt home at 803 North Tenth street, and invited him to go along. William went as far as Ninth and Morgan streets, where Frank Bowers, a neighbor, who saw the child leave, scuffled with Wallace and recovered the boy. Bowers followed until he met a policeman, and had the sailor arrested.

Following an inspection at City Hospital Wallace was locked up. He explained that he is fond of children, and intended returning William to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Merritt, after taking a walk with the boy.

BUENOS AIRES, July 26.—The newspaper Noticias Graficas says several groups in the Chamber of Deputies are considering privately a possible necessity for a moratorium on Argentina's foreign obligations. Chilled to death ... by warm air!

PEOPLE still get the wrong idea from the story about the little boy who was covered with gold leaf so that his appearance would add color to a pageant in Renaissance Italy. You remember the way the story ends. He died in a few hours. It is usually said that he died because his pores were stopped up and that his death resulted from smothering. You know the skin needs to do a lot of breathing for us. But science has disproved this smothering theory.

Science says that the boy could have been kept alive if he had been kept warm. For the action of the skin keeps body temperature exactly at normal though exposed to heat from flames and cold from icy fields. His clogged skin could not do its work—couldn't keep the heat of his body normal even in the mildness of Mediterranean weather. His vital organs were subjected to below-normal temperature long enough to cause death.

The important thing to remember about these facts is that your skin can and does do a great deal for you every minute you're alive. Good skin is a great deal more than a mere covering for your body, more than a vanity. It's a health asset to be prized.

One of the best ways you can help your old friend skin is to give it the protection of the best and safest soap. The experience of millions during the past fifty years, tells you that your best choice is Cuticura Soap. It contains the same delicate medication which makes Cuticura Ointment ideal for blind pimples and skin eruptions. INTENSIVE DRIVE HERE AS CAMPAIGN DRAWS TO A CLOSE Dearmont to Concentrate on St. Louis and County—Supporters of His Rival Wilson Also Active.

Plans for an intensive finish of State Senator Russell L. Dearmont's campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor in St. Louis and St. Louis County were announced today. Dearmont is to speak at several meetings Thursday, Friday and Saturday in a determined drive for a large share of approximately 70,000 Democratic votes expected to be cast here in the primary next Tuesday.

The climax of the Dearmont campaign will be a mass meeting Saturday night at Handlan's Park, Grand boulevard and Lechmere avenue, at which speakers will include former Circuit Judge Daniel G. Taylor, James M. Douglas, W. Frank Carter and Jacob M. Lashly.

Meanwhile, supporters of Francis M. Wilson, Dearmont's most formidable opponent, are waging a vigorous campaign throughout this section of the State, making this one of the most interesting political battles fought in a Missouri primary in many years.

Speakers for Wilson being heard in many sections of St. Louis tonight include former Congressman William L. Igoe, Bernard F. Dickmann, Dr. W. G. Patton, John J. Nangle, Owen G. Jackson and E. W. Blackmore.

In speeches last night at ward meetings, Igoe charged that Republicans are planning to vote the Democratic ticket in the primary in order to try to nominate Dearmont. Igoe asserted the drys look upon Dearmont as their friend and that leading drys are actively working for him.

Kiel Speaks Again. The campaign of former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, seeking the Republican nomination for United States Senator, was interrupted when he sprained his ankle Sunday at his farm near Eureka. He had to cancel speaking engagements early this week at Springfield, Joplin and Carthage, but is expected to go to Kansas City tomorrow for a series of speeches in Jackson County. His son-in-law, Circuit Judge Granville Egan, and his daughter, Miss Edna Kiel, went to Springfield today to represent him at a scheduled meeting.

Clark to Speak Tonight. Col. Bennett Clark, Democratic candidate for the senatorial nomination, is to speak at a rally tonight at Handlan's Park, under the auspices of the Jefferson Club, which has previously sponsored rallies for two other Democratic senatorial candidates.

The veterans' bonus issue has been injected into the local campaign for Congressional nominations by the St. Louis posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The posts are distributing circulars urging veterans and their friends to vote against eight present members of the Missouri delegation in Congress seeking re-nomination, who voted against the recent bill in Congress for immediate cash payment of the veterans' adjusted compensation certificates which are not due until 1945.

The Congressmen opposed by this group of veterans are: Ralph F. Lester, J. L. Milligan, Clarence Cannon and John J. Cochran, Democrats, and David Hopkins, H. F. McPherson, L. C. Dyer and Joe J. Manlove, Republicans.

SIX FAMILIES STILL RECEIVE 1927 TORNADO RELIEF FUNDS

Trusts Set Up by Red Cross From Public Contributions Aid Widows and Children.

Almost five years after the St. Louis tornado of Sept. 29, 1927, six families rendered destitute by the tornado are still receiving help from trust funds set up by the Red Cross from public contributions in the relief campaign which followed the disaster. Miss Margaret L. Grotton, director of home service at the St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, told of this situation in a radio talk today.

The tornado killed 76 persons, injured some 1500, wrecked 8000 buildings and displaced nearly 8000 families. Of 150 funds set up by the Red Cross to provide for the neediest of these families, six are still active. The families are those of women widowed by the tornado and left with small children. Some of these children are now being kept in school by the trust funds, the longest of which will run until 1936.

BRITON'S FORMULA FOR PEACE

Sir John Simon Says Hope Rests on Anglo-U. S. Amity.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, July 26.—Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, referred in the course of distributing prizes at Dover College yesterday to conversations with American representatives during the recent Lausanne debt conference.

"After being in Lausanne and Geneva and very closely in touch with responsible representatives in the United States," he said, "I believe that if wisdom prevails on both sides of the Atlantic we might find growing into fruition a firmly rooted plant of Anglo-American cooperation upon which as much as anything in the world depends the peaceful progress of mankind."

MAN HIT ON HEAD DURING FIGHT DIES

George J. Havener Held for Coroner—Warrant Previously Refused.

William Shoemaker, 40-year-old paperhanger, died at City Hospital last night of a skull injury suffered last Friday evening when he was struck on the head with a stick of wood by George J. Havener, 26-year-old laborer, 2610A Howard street.

Shoemaker was taken to the hospital from Havener's home after Havener called police. According to Havener, Shoemaker went to the house and was admitted by Mrs. Havener, who discovered he had been drinking and ordered him to leave.

The visitor refused. Havener said, and struck his wife with a coffee pot. Havener heard his wife cry for help and going to her aid, was hit with the coffee pot, which he wrested from Shoemaker. Havener said he used the stick of wood in self-defense when Shoemaker drew a knife.

The Circuit Attorney's office refused to issue a warrant against Havener last Saturday. He was rearrested last night for the Coroner. Shoemaker had no permanent address, according to police.

11 PROPERTY OWNERS SEEK WIDENING OF LUCAS AVENUE

Area Between Jefferson and Grand Would Be Affected; Public Hearing Set.

A petition, signed by 11 property owners and presented to the Board of Public Service today, asked the city to widen Lucas avenue for 10 blocks between Jefferson avenue and Grand boulevard. The board set a public hearing on the matter for Aug. 14.

Street widenings rarely have been sought by property owners in recent years, but, on the contrary, there has been much opposition to widening plans among property holders. Mrs. Johanna Johnson, 2419 Lucas avenue, owner of 425 feet of property in the district led the signers of this petition.

No proposed width was specified, but city engineers think 80 feet might be satisfactory. Lucas is 60 feet wide between Jefferson and Leffingwell avenues and 40 feet between Leffingwell and Grand. It is not on the city's major street plan and is one block north of Washington boulevard, which is broad.

GETS LIFE IN PENITENTIARY SAME DAY HE KILLS WIFE
By the Associated Press.
ELKHORN, Wis., July 26.—Stanley Smorok, 33 years old, who shot and killed his wife yesterday, was sentenced to life imprisonment in Waupun prison by Circuit Judge C. W. Davison, Beaver Dam, later in the day, after he had pleaded guilty of first degree murder and intent to murder his mother-in-law. He was taken to the prison last evening.

The shooting occurred at the home of Smorok's mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Hart, near here, during a family conference at which Smorok had sought to effect a reconciliation with his wife, Helen, 32. When Mrs. Smorok refused to return with him to Chicago, the husband pulled out a revolver and shot her. Mrs. Hart ran from the room and a bullet aimed at her struck a dog, George Hart, a brother-in-law of Smorok, grasped with him, but the remaining shots in the pistol went wild.

21 HURT IN COLLISION ON CHICAGO ELEVATED

Express Train Runs Into Local, Throwing Five Cars Off Track.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, July 26.—Twenty-one persons were injured when two elevated trains collided a mile west of the loop yesterday, toward the close of the evening rush hour.

Five cars were derailed, but were kept from toppling off the high structure by the couplings that held them to cars remaining on the tracks. Both trains, one a six-car suburban local and the other an eight-car express, were westbound. The latter crashed into the rear car of the suburban train, throwing passengers into a panic. Windows in nearly all the 14 cars were shattered and many commuters suffered cuts.

Firemen carried the injured out first and then aided the others to get to the ground. Fifteen injured were taken to a hospital for treatment. The motorman of the rear train said the brakes failed.

$6200 HOLDUP OF KANSAS CITY HANDBOOK IS DISCLOSED

Robbery of Place Frequent by Women Had Not Been Reported to Police.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 26.—The Kansas City Star says the Turf, a race horse betting establishment catering to women, was held up and robbed of $6200 by five men last Saturday. No report of the robbery was made to police. The newspaper says the robbers entered the place late in the day when preparation were being made to pay off on final tickets. The robbers were said to have taken $3000 from a safe; $200 from a cash register and $3000 from cash tills on gambling tables and from customers, who were forced to lie on the floor.

Today Hudson proudly presents the ESSEX TERRAPLANE

What a Car!—and the lowest-priced Six in America!

and up, f.o.b. Detroit

Back of the ESSEX TERRAPLANE is not only more than 200,000 miles of road-testing, but the experience and capacity of Hudson, one of the oldest and most progressive manufacturers in the automobile industry—a company which for nearly a quarter-century has been distinguished by advanced engineering, sound manufacturing and dependable value in all its products.

Not only a new model but a new kind of automobile!

What the world in time to come will recognize as the first and original "post-depression type of motor car" dates from July 21, 1932.

For on this day herewith is offered the ESSEX TERRAPLANE—as fresh and modern and unhackneyed in comparison with existing designs as is the wafer-thin watch to the ancient turnip, the 4-ounce fly-rod to the clumsy bamboo, the 20-gauge trap-gun to the old smoothbore.

You have never seen an automobile like it. It patterns a brand-new school.

It heralds something thrilling and new in highway travel—a skimming, dashing, mile-eating, safely close-to-the-road swift smooth motion such as has not been enjoyed before except in planing on the water or in the air.

Here is power set free—suave six-cylindered pneumounted power—unfettered of deadweight—vibrationless as a jar-of jelly upon the pantry shelf.

Here is big-car roominess, heavy-car "road-sense", costly-car comfort, small-car hardbitten Scotch thrift—in an amazing performer of an automobile that's feather-light to handle and sheer fun to drive.

Here is a new physical sensation in motoring which rests solidly on inspired engineering, and which cannot be captured on paper by camera or linotype.

Get out on the road and TERRAPLANE if you want to know how it feels to ride in V-16 fashion at a price that's actually down among and UNDER the former lowest-priced Three!

Women will be glad to know that Miss Amelia Earhart, who christened the ESSEX TERRAPLANE, is advising with the Hudson technical staff on matters of design and appointments.

HAY JOKES RIVALS

ON THEIR WETNESS

Wants to Know if They Are Trying to Read Dry
Out of Party.

Charles M. Hay, Democratic candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, told a group of his supporters at a luncheon in St. Louis yesterday that he would have something more to say about the tactics of one of his opponents, Charles M. Howell of Kansas City, "within the next 48 hours."

Hay already has charged Howell, who is the Pendergast machine candidate, with undue expenditure of money.

Referring to the emphasis his opponents are placing on their wetness, Hay said:

"My opponents continue to be distressed over the fact that both wets and dries are supporting me. They are excited beyond measure because the dry organizations of the State support me. It seems to me that as true Democrats they ought to rejoice that there is a Democrat available whom dries as well as wets are supporting. Don't they want a united party? Don't they want dry votes in November? In their desperation to win this nomination are they willing to read dry out of the party?"

"Howell sees visions about this, and as quoted in the press recently, laments a possible headline, reading: 'Veteran Dry Wins Senatorial Nomination.' May I suggest that the headline might read: 'Loyal Democrat Wins Nomination.' I hope I am not immodest when I say that it might well read: 'Loyal Progressive Democrat Wins Nomination.'"

"I hope the party of Jefferson and Wilson, the party which stands for a truly progressive economic program, a program for the farmer and the laborer, for employment, for the protection of small business men; for an anti-trust and monopoly policy; for a sound utility policy may be spared such a headline as this: 'Professional Reciprocal Insurance and Utility Lobbyist Wins Senatorial Nomination.'"

"A dry can stand for the great economic program; a dry can stand, as I stand, for the submission of a repeal proposal so as to enable the people to have their way; a dry can conscientiously support Franklin Roosevelt, the great progressive Democrat, as the hope of the party for economic relief; but there is no place in the present program of the party for the leadership of a man who for years has been identified with and is now identified with interests and practices inimical to true democracy."

LAWYER ALLOWED $5000 FEE

IN PLAZA CONDEMNATION SUIT

Henry Kortjohn Represented Property Owners Who Were Awarded $47,084.

Henry Kortjohn, a lawyer, was allowed a $5000 fee for representing property owners in the Memorial Plaza condemnation suit, by Circuit Judge Hogan today. At a hearing on a motion for the fee several days ago Kortjohn produced testimony to show this was the reasonable value of his services, while his clients called witnesses who said $3000 would be enough. Kortjohn was attorney for Mrs. Virginia Peach, widow of Fred Peach, and Mrs. Ethel Peach, widow of Joseph Peach. The Peaches, brothers, owned 77 front feet of property on the north side of Market street, east of Thirteenth street, which stood in the name of Joseph E. Conroy. Condemnation commissioners awarded $47,084 for this property, but the city filed exception to the award as excessive. The exception was overruled and the award stood. By court order $25,099 of the damages was devoted to paying off a mortgage and the owners received $21,985 net. Kortjohn pointed out that he was in the case for four years or more.

CRAMER INJURED, WILL BE LOST TO MACKS FOR YEAR

By the Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Roger (Doc) Cramer's only chance of getting back in a regular baseball game this season is for Connie Mack's Athletics to win the American League pennant, it appeared today.

Cramer broke his left shoulder bone yesterday when he fell heavily while trying to catch a Texas League ball. He was injured from the bat of Joe Mauer, New York third baseman. Specialists explained that the crippled "Doc," second only to Jimmy Fox in Athletic batting averages, will be able to leave the hospital in about three days for his home at Manahawick, N. J., but his arm will not be removed from a sling until about Sept. 1.

Several more weeks after that will be required before the injured arm will be in shape to play again, and by that time the regular playing season will be nearly ended. Should the Athletics head the Yankees, however, Cramer likely would be able to play in the world series.

Cramer's bad break was a good omen for Johnny Jones, a Philadelphia youngster who was stranded at Albany, N. Y., when the Eastern League abandoned. Jones was spending the game yesterday as a visiting spectator when Cramer was crippled.

ORDERS CHICAGO TEACHERS TO BE PAID BY WARRANT

Supreme Bench Holds These Warrants Shall Be Accepted for Taxes From 1932 On.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 28.—Payment of Cook County School Teachers' back salaries by warrant was upheld by the Supreme Court today.

Granting writs of mandamus both to Winifred Matthews, and to Irene Mereness of Glenwood, the Supreme Court directed that their salaries for services to 1931 and 1932 be paid in warrants in all cases where funds were unavailable, and that these warrants be accepted for payment of taxes levied in 1932 or after. The opinion in both cases, however, held that such warrants were not acceptable in payment of taxes levied before 1932.

DRY REPEAL FIRST, DAIRY DRIVERS' PAY CUT APPROVED BY ARBITERS

Columbia U. Head Says G. O. P. Prohibition Plank Amuses Europe.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, returned to America today on the liner Majestic with news that the Republican party plank on prohibition "is the subject of no inconsiderable merriment and sarcasm" abroad.

He handed out a four-page statement in which he discussed the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, in the interest of which he went to Europe, and the eighteenth amendment. Most of the space was devoted to the liquor issue.

"It will be quite futile for any candidate, in the hope of conciliating any element of the population, to attempt to subordinate the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the solution of the economic problems which press upon us all," he said in the statement.

"The two are inextricably intertwined. What possible meaning could prosperity have if we are to continue to undermine the Constitution of the United States, to weaken the foundation of public and private morality and to turn into the pockets of the bootleggers the enormous sums which should be paid to the public Treasury for the relief of the taxpayer?"

"Should not more than 15 states adopt an effective system of state liquor control such as prevails in the Province of Quebec or in Sweden, and should rate of taxation be established not greater than that which now prevails in Great Britain, the lowest estimate is that $1,500,000,000 would be available for the public Treasury."

"Every interest of the American people requires the quick repeal of the eighteenth amendment and immediate action to bring about a restoration of prosperity through international co-operation in reference to inter-governmental war debts, through the removal of harmful restrictions upon trade due to tariff, quotas and administrative regulations, and through a prompt study of the pressing problems which grow out of the present gold supply and the way it has been used internationally since the war."

GENOA, Italy, July 28.—The Italian Steamship Line announced today that the navigating time between Genoa and New York will be cut from nine days to about six when the giant new liners Rex and Conte di Savoia go into service next winter. The Rex is due to make its first voyage Sept. 27 and the Conte di Savoia Nov. 18.

CONCORDIA, Kan., July 28.—The Cloud County Bank was robbed of an undetermined amount of currency today by four men who shielded their escape by forcing three girls to ride on the running boards of their automobile until it reached the city limits.

The girls, Marie Frederickson and Ida Cook, bank employees, last March, were released unharmed.

The four men entered the bank when about 30 customers were present. The customers and bank employees were ordered to lie on the floor. The robbers picked up the money in the tills and then ordered J. C. Peck, vice-president, to open the vault. Peck refused and was struck on the head with a revolver. M. L. West, a farmer, was talking with the banker as the robbers approached. He, too, was struck on the head. Neither was injured badly.

Commanding the three girls to accompany them, the robbers left the bank, entered their sedan with Nebraska license plates and drove north on Highway 81. The girls were released as the automobile reached the highway.

ALEXANDER

UPON our arrival in Ay-Todor—the voyage had been made under a heavy guard of sailors—we received a long list of “don’ts” from a gentleman who bore the resounding title of Special Commissioner of the Provisional Government.

We were to consider ourselves prisoners, our movements limited to the borders of our estate—175 acres of Ay-Todor’s park, right on the water front, made this restriction rather enjoyable but the other regulations created a great deal of misery.

A patrol of armed sailors, picked for their radical views, had the right to enter our rooms at any time of the day or night. No correspondence could be received or sent by us without special permission of the commissioner, who was to be present at all meals. An interpreter followed on his heels, in case we should attempt to double-cross the revolution in a foreign language. Friends desirous of paying us a visit had to be searched, both on entering and on leaving the estate.

The amount of candles and kerosene was to be checked every other day. The purpose of the last measure being somewhat vague to my old-fashioned mind, I assured the commissioner that we possessed no formula of making bombs out of candles and kerosene.

“It is not that,” he said, blushing. “It is to keep the Bolsheviks quiet. They think you may signal to the Turkish Navy.”

It would have taken quite a candle to signal to the fleet that stood in the Bosphorus, some 400 miles away from the coast of Crimea, but this asinine remark opened my eyes on the precarious position of the commissioner. He represented the Provisional Government, while the sailors safeguarded the interests of the Bolsheviks. No love was lost between the two organizations. The sailors distrusted the commissioner, and the commissioner watched with anguish the assortment of hands grenades attached to their belts. A former member of the Russian Parliament, raised and educated in a well-to-do family, he attempted to ride the storm thinking that in a month or two the country would be back to normal life, leaving the power in the hands of his friends. Like all irresponsible Russian liberals he got caught between two fires, and his utter insincerity failed to deceive the cynical sailors. They treated him with open contempt, disregarding his orders and even refusing to stand up in his presence. No matter how hard he tried to show extreme discourtesy toward me and the members of my family, the Bolsheviks continued to accuse him of plotting to arrange the escape of Grand Duke Nicholas, the former commander-in-chief of the Russian army, who came to the Crimea shortly after our arrival. Accompanied by his wife (Grand Duchess Stana) and his brother (Grand Duke Peter).

WORRIED, frightened expression never left the face of the commissioner. Looking aside at his terrifying assistants, he would address us in a manner which tended to imitate their revolutionary language. “Former Grand Duke Alexander,” in April I became “Admiral Romanoff.” In May, by June I was plain “Citizen Romanoff.” One word of protest from me would have made him supremely happy. My indifference brought him designs to laugh. He was in despair. He glared with hatred at the old Empress, hoping against hope that she at least would protest. I doubt if she ever noticed a word of mine. Morning till night she sat on the veranda, reading her old family Bible that had accompanied her on all voyages since the day she left Denmark in the early sixties of the last century.

The great commissioner of the Government that promised Liberty, Equality and Fraternity for all, wound up by trying his luck with my youngest son. He must have heard somewhere of a similar method practiced during the French Revolution. He addressed the boy in the language of Robespierre, so as to stick to the model in every detail. My son corrected his French phrasing and let it go at that.

My wife laughed but I felt a peculiar presentiment of danger. Alarming news coming from the north indicated an imminent seizure of power by the Bolsheviks. In order to be in the good graces of the sovietists this guardian of ours would have to qualify at no matter what price.

I woke up with a start. Something cold was touching my forehead. I raised my hand to ascertain its nature but a gruff voice said in threatening tones: “Not a move or I’ll shoot you on the spot.”

I opened my eyes and saw two silhouettes standing over our bedside. It must have been around four o’clock judging by the grayish light creeping through the windows. “What do you want from us?” asked my wife. “If you are after my jewels, you will find them on the little table in the corner.” “No such luck,” answered the same voice. “We are after you aristocrats. Your game’s up. The whole house is surrounded. We are

The Man From Sing Sing

Moran Chambers Was in Prison But His Deadly Enemy Felt His Power—The Second Installment of a New Serial Story.

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

CHAPTER TWO.

AMBOYNA drifted away and was pounced upon at once by one of the many cavaliers who were waiting their opportunity. Argels passed her a few minutes later on his way to the smoking room, the center of a little group of men, young and old. She raised her eyes. There was no recognition in her fleet glance, nor any friendship; something, perhaps, of menace, a little of mockery. He passed impatiently on to the smoking room. After all, the woman was an artist, and no artist possesses common sense. He patted his evening Maroonigan, which remained in his coat pocket.

In the smoking room Argels found Pulwitt alone and he at once took the vacant seat by his side.

“Andrew,” he announced, “I want to talk to you.”

The Scotchman eyed him keenly from underneath his shaggy eyebrows.

“I couldn’t believe my eyes when I saw Moran’s little lady talking to you just now,” he observed. “What might she have been saying?”

“Just a few words of nonsense,” was the irritable reply. “According to her, Chambers can walk out of prison when he chooses. A woman who gets that way about a man is simply crazy. I came here to talk to you about something else.”

He ordered whiskey-and-sodas from the bar, lit a cigarette, and waited while his companion filled a peculiarly disreputable-looking pipe.

“What are your plans when you arrive in London?” he asked presently.

“My mind is undecided for the moment,” Pulwitt acknowledged. “We ought to plan with us, and there’s the Bamford Trust in the near future. I’ll probably buy a small house up near Edinburgh and take things easy.”

Argels laughed scornfully. “A man with a brain like yours is not going to be content with a million dollars. We both know that. I am going to make mine into ten.”

“You’re a younger man than I am and you need occupation,” Pulwitt remarked.

“So do you,” Argels insisted. “As soon as you smell the money-making in the air, you’ll want to be getting at it. Now, Andrew, let’s have this out. You’ve always been a business man, and you’ve proved the bargain I made, although you owe your liberty to it. Never mind that. You can’t alter what’s happened. Every man for himself in this world. That’s the only policy a business man can afford to have. Therefore, I say wipe out the past and its prejudices. Moran Chambers is off the map, but you and I are still on it. I have ideas of my own about a financial business in London. What about coming in with me? Equal capital, equal profits, and I’ll guarantee that I’ll do most of the work.”

ANDREW PULWITT withdrew his pipe from his mouth and laid it by his side.

“That’s a plain question,” he said, “and I’ll give you a plain answer. I will not come in with you, Reuben Argels. I would not be your partner in any serious enterprise for any money you could offer me.”

There was a moment’s pause. Argels was not a sensitive man, but his companion’s uncompromising speech had struck him in the stomach. There was a flush in his cheeks, a half-angry, half-hurt look in his eyes.

“Why not?” he protested. “Is it my box?”

“No,” said Argels. “You had the social backing, of course, and your judgment was always good, but I made most of the money that was made by our little syndicate.”

“You did well enough,” Pulwitt admitted. “You have a money-making brain, and I’m not doubting that, but if you live long enough, you’ll make more, but I’ll not be your partner for two reasons. First, is that I wouldn’t form an association with a perjurer, and the second is that I don’t want my affairs mixed up with yours when Moran Chambers strikes back.”

Reuben Argels was a very disturbed man. The quietness of his tone was only attained by a mighty effort at repression.

“I saved you from prison, Andrew Pulwitt,” he declared, “as well as myself, by making a bargain, if you choose to call it so, with the prosecution, and giving the evidence against Moran which they couldn’t collect. They wanted Moran and they didn’t want us. We’re both free and we’re both rich men. Do you owe me nothing for that?”

“What you did, you did to save your own skin,” said Andrew Pulwitt’s stern rejoinder. “I haven’t a word of thanks or a sentence of gratitude to offer you. Furthermore, if I had known what you were going to do, I’d have fought my way into the box. It was a foul thing you did, Argels. I don’t believe for a moment that you’ll get away with it.”

Reuben Argels finished his drink, brushed the cigar ash from his waistcoat, and stood up.

“Pulwitt,” he said, “I am very glad you decided as you did. I mean—do we search or don’t we?”

“You know better.”

“You know better.”

“You know better.”

they are not to be found in this stateroom. I am telling you the truth.”

“It’s not credible,” the other demurred. “No man carries around with him a chest like this with four locks to it and no key.”

“Upon the table to your left,” Argels pointed out, “you will notice a box of cigarettes and a briquet. If, without disturbing that dangerously poised revolver of yours, you could throw them to me with your left hand, I should, I believe, be able to take a more intelligent share in this conversation.”

The Scotchman stretched out his hand and threw the articles, one by one, on to the bed. Argels lit a cigarette and blew a cloud of smoke down his nostrils with great satisfaction.

“You see, Andrew,” he explained, “this position was difficult. I boarded this steamship with a lot of documents which I knew you people needed badly and which might possibly get me into trouble. I had also with me a very large number of bonds which, for certain reasons, I preferred to carry on the other side. Now, as you have already appreciated, it takes a strong man to even lift that case, so it isn’t easily stolen. The only complete, therefore, about its security is in the keys. Do you know what I did with them, Andrew?”

“You are going to tell me that they are in the pursers’ office, I suppose,” the other grunted. “We will see about that.”

“I am going to tell you nothing of the sort,” Argels assured him. “I sent the keys across on the Levenia, which left 24 hours before us, and my agent will meet me at the customs shed at Marseilles with them, and two plainclothes policemen promised me by the Chef de Surete.”

The Scotchman reflected for a few minutes.

“It was a bright scheme,” he admitted.

Argels held his head for a moment. Then he drew himself a little farther up the bed.

“Listen,” he said, “I’ll recount to you this my second adventure of the sort within the last few hours. I was leaning over the side of the ship just before midnight and I felt a prick on my shoulder. Someone had stolen up behind me and, with a small poniard, stabbed me just enough to break the skin. I tried to catch the fellow, but he must have gone over the rails and down into the second class. For when I got to the cross deck he

He may be trying to break your nerve.”

“Let him try,” Argels muttered defiantly. “I’m not such a weakling as all that.”

“Nevertheless,” the Scotchman meditated, “there’s many a time I’ve heard Moran say that to kill a man outright was no sort of punishment at all. He may have another scheme in his head.”

Argels, now quite at his ease, lit a cigarette and leaned forward. The blue wisps of smoke curled around his overmanicured fingernails.

“Andrew,” he proposed, “chuck in your hand. Join up with me. Chambers played for a big stake and lost. I won. Join the winning side. You’ll make all the money you want. I’ll promise you that, and we’d work together wonderfully. In London we don’t need to run any risks.”

The Scotchman shook his head.

“When I take a partner,” he confessed, “I like to feel that there are a few years of life still before him. If you see six months out, you’ll be lucky.”

“You and Ambouyna, and the amiable gentleman who pricked my shoulder blade, are going to make sure of that, I suppose,” Reuben Argels sneered.

“There are more than three of us who’d go through fire and water for Moran Chambers,” the Argels took particular care to make no movement. “You told me you left the rough stuff to others,” he said reproachfully.

“The story is most interesting,” Pulwitt admitted. “I am bound to acknowledge that I had no share in it, though. My legs may be long, but I have passed that time here at half-past two in the morning and settled down in front of my treasure chest as though you would open it by staring at it. I would have invited you in any time to have looked it over in peaceful fashion.”

“I was sure that I wouldn’t find the keys,” Pulwitt explained. “More fool you!” Argels scoffed. “What do you take me for—one of the babes in the wood?”

The Scotchman sighed. “I was a wee bit of an optimist perhaps,” he admitted. “It’s a fine chest,” he went on, looking at it thoughtfully. “He’d be a master of his profession who broke into that without the proper keys.”

“He would indeed,” Argels agreed. “I told the man who made it that I wanted a chest that no one could smash and a lock that could never be copied. I’m inclined to think that he served me well.”

“He did and no mistake,” the other acknowledged ruefully. “There’s no tampering with a piece of work like that.”

“Having arrived at that conclusion,” he suggested, “as I am a little sleepy, and we are both ruining our night’s rest, might I propose that we now break up this session?”

“Ah!” the Scotchman murmured thoughtfully, as he finished his whiskey and soda.

“You see, I bear you no ill will for your intrusion upon my privacy,” Argels went on, “for your attempt to acquire my property. It’s all in the game.”

“Very well, then, what about a friendly good night?”

Andrew Pulwitt drew up his straggling legs and rose to his feet. “You may be right,” he agreed. “The hour is late.”

“Hope you’ve enjoyed your visit,” Argels grinned.

“FINE,” the intruder replied, looking back from the threshold. “And, Reuben, lad.”

“Well?”

“It was a clever trick of yours sending those keys on to Marseilles. Has there never been a time, though, when it seemed to you to be inconvenient without them, when you felt that you would like to just look over those documents and check them up?”

Argels shook his head, with another yawn.

“I know pretty well what’s there,” he confessed sleepily.

The Scotchman’s last figure had almost disappeared. Only his long, lean face remained looking back into the room.

“If you should be disturbed in your mind about their safety at any time, Argels,” he remarked, “if you want to kind of check them up or anything, come around and see me. Maybe I’d be able to help.”

The door was closed with a slam. Argels sprang from the bed, suddenly awake. He knelt in front of the chest and, without the slightest effort, threw back the lid. The interior was divided into two steel compartments. In one there was a thick pile of bonds, which had apparently been left undisturbed; the other was empty.

MY DEAR MRS. CARR: I am writing you in regard to many inquiries you have had from home. I have a place in the country, a somewhat humble home, but still a good one with plenty to eat, six milk cows, young cattle and a garden. I should be glad to have an assistant with my work. For the present, I do not feel able to pay wages but will provide board and shelter. If “Reuben” has found a place, I think we might agree. Or some one else of the same type. I am leaving my address with you. A. McC.

CONCLUSION.

MR. KERN, CARE: SHERWOOD was supervising the packing of his supplies on the S. S. Meglin. Tinned goods, cameras, boats which would take him up unexplored rivers. One of the most important items was a small airplane lashed to the top deck. Four months ago when he arranged for the building of this special plane he had been excited as a boy with a new toy. Now he was watching the men manhandle it phlegmatically. He didn't much care whether he had a plane or not.

From the list in his hand he checked off the items carefully as they came, his two assistants busy with him.

Another trip. Another year before he would be seeing civilization again. Maybe more than a year if he were unlucky. How many times had he made into the interior? It didn't matter.

The Meglin was purely a freighter, but Sherwood had traveled on before, and knew what it could do for him.

His accommodations were the same, too. Room for six passengers in six separate cabins, and he was taking them all, as he had done in the past, two for himself and the remaining four double up the six men.

Two extra men this trip to man the moving picture cameras he had brought with him. He didn't have to pay them, however, as the film picture people were carrying their own gear and the men were to make the films. Also they had agreed to buy all the film footages that was taken. Contract made. A contract that a few months ago would have meant a deal to him, for it represented substantial figure.

"Young lady to see you, sir." "Show her in." Max said rudely, as he put his finger on the light button. A girl reporter, he supposed. He'd had one of them already this afternoon, wanting to know all the details of the trip. He was lighting his cigarette when Julie entered.

"I've been calling you all day, Max," she announced as she sat down in the leather chair. "Finally I persuaded Martin to bring me down here to see you."

"But I don't call until tomorrow noon—"

"I know, but I wanted to look at my quarters." Sitting there with her legs smiling at her, crossing her knees, and sinking farther back in the chair.

"You aren't going, Julie—I told you that before."

"I know you told me that, Max."

— "I'm talking tomorrow at noon," Bisher said. "I can't come to the meeting." But the lawyer had come up before him. "Yes— The long days and nights on the two previous trips to him and Lawson had been punishing, and it was now nearly an hour. A tournament that he and the Sherwood expedition had left the Meglin. This trip, he supposed, would be the same, playing chess with Lawson. He had to go back to Mr. Julie. On those trips there had been no Julie in his life and he had entered wholeheartedly into the chess tournament. "Someone called the captain away," Sherwood handed his list to one of his assistants. Slowly he stepped up the deck to the place where he was to live for three days. The captain had not yet come before she touched the Atlantic coast.

"NOW will you take me?" Her

MR. MRS. CARR: But he knew it wasn't the way he dreamed, knew it was the reason. Without Julie, wanting to know how he might be able to get her back—she had refused. A fool to take her back, she would come loving again. He couldn't bear that. He wanted her back, but he never loved her didn't want her. He never knew how much hurt there was in it. It was only a whim. . . .

Poliomyelitis Problems

is 15 but fitting now that the epidemic of poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis, is over, that we should take stock of what the experience has taught us.

To begin with, then, there is the residue of problems still unsolved. These concern the important features of transmission, diagnosis and prophylaxis of the disease.

How is infantile paralysis transmitted? This problem has been definitely answered in part only. It is established beyond doubt that it is spread from human to human, and most probably by the excretions of the nose and throat.

Other agencies, too, may, however, spread the virus of poliomyelitis, such as food, milk, etc.

That there are carriers of the disease, that is, persons who harbor the polio virus and are capable of passing it on to others though they themselves are not sick with it, has been shown to be a fact.

Also there are the so-called mild cases which may pass on the virus to others and cause serious disease. In these cases the own condition may be undiagnosed.

With all these facts taken into consideration, it must at once become apparent that the control of the disease must be by other means than absolute quarantine, a form of quarantine which would completely and absolutely shut out the world from contact with the families of the hospitalized cases.

And again, if foods may convey the polio virus, there is no assurance that even the most drastic quarantine may help stem the

BERG KIDNAPERS SENTENCED, ENTER NOTICE OF APPEAL

Charles Heuer Formally Ordered to Serve 99 Years, Edward Barcume 25, and George Peak 25.

NO DEFENDANTS ATTACK VERDICTS

He Says He Was Put on Trial for Bank Robbery and Abduction of the Lindbergh Baby.

Three of the kidnapers of Alexander Berg, convicted by juries, are sentenced formally to penitentiary terms in Circuit Court today. Charles Heuer, ex-convict and leader of the gang which abducted the wealthy fur dealer on Nov. 10, and held him more than four years in a fruitless effort to collect $500,000 ransom, was sentenced to 99 years. Edward Barcume, also an ex-convict, was sentenced to 25 years as Heuer's first lieutenant in the abduction. George Peak, paroled murderer, was sentenced to 25 years as a likely victim, was also sentenced to 25 years.

New Trials Denied. Prior to entry of sentence, Judge Percy overruled a motion for new trial for Barcume, and Judge Berg took the same action in the case of Peak and Heuer. All the chances were fixed by the trial judge. As soon as they had been entered, defense counsel filed notices of appeal, and the prisoners were taken back to City Jail. Barcume was the first to be called before the bar in Judge Owsing's court. Judge Percy, sitting there temporarily, asked him if he had anything to say. The sardonic Barcume, characteristically laconic, said he had.

"I don't think I was justly treated," he said. "I was tried for that bank robbery and for the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby. It was never shown I took part in the kidnapping of Mr. Berg."

"That bank robbery" was the upshot of a bank in Winfield, Mo., which Heuer and Barcume took over, and following which they were arrested for the Berg abduction. At the time of his trial an intensive search was being conducted for the kidnapped son of Col. Lindbergh.

After Barcume had concluded, Judge Percy entered sentence and left the bench to make way for Judge Owsing, who called Heuer up for sentence.

Accused Police Department. Heuer, tubercular and thin to maculation, was also asked what he had to say.

"Four Honor," he replied, "do you think I was justly convicted?" "I'm asking you if you have a statement to make," the court countered. "Have you?"

"Well, I think the Police Department had direct contact with that guy," Heuer replied. Sentence was not entered.

Peak, next called, shook his head negatively when he was asked what he had to say.

The sentences imposed today were only one convicted defendant, Charles Tucker, to be disposed of. Tucker pleaded guilty and was willing State's witness. He is scheduled for sentence Friday. Curtis Medlock, who also pleaded guilty, is now serving a 25-year term.

The sixth defendant, Paul A. Richards, attorney charged with having acted for the kidnapers in the attempt to collect ransom, was required at a second trial after the jury at the first hearing had failed to arrive at a verdict.

100 SHOTGUNS, 1000 STICKS ORDERED BY POLICE BOARD

Order Releases Order Making Possible Prompt Mobilization of City's Entire Force.

The Board of Police Commissioners has ordered 1000 12-inch hickory sticks and 100 automatic shotguns shooting four 20-gauge shells. Chief of Police Gerk released today an order of Sept. 7, 1926, providing that each policeman place his telephone number so that the force may be mobilized speedily. It is estimated the present force of about 1800 men can be mobilized in half an hour. The hickory sticks, which cost 2 cents each, are about the diameter of the bats used in playing cork ball. The "whipped" type, have shot-barrel, pistol grips, and cost $25 each.
